STAT

Area of Coverage: China - Manchuria, Liaoning, Mukden

Subjects Covered: Increase production drive; labor productivity; production emulation campaign. Gives charts and tables.

Scholarship Evaluation: A comprehensive collection of articles on the Ma Heng-ch'ang Cell Competition Movement [the Chinese Communist version of the Soviet Stakhanovite Movement]

Review: A collection of 40 newspaper editorials, labor-union statements, and addresses praising the Ma Heng-ch'ang movement and urging its adoption by labor unions and workers throughout the nation. Describes how Ma organized his production unit, and how the unit improved production techniques and increased the productivity and improved the quality of the products. Explains how the unit challenged other units to compete in production. Surveys participation in the movement by workers in various types of factories and mines in localities such as Shanghai, Tientsin, An-tung, Sian, and Peiping.

Some of the production problems of Chinese industry are indicated in articles on model production units in textile and weaving plants, medical instrument manufacturing, machine shops, and coal mines.
